Whether competing as an athlete or coaching a successful team, the discipline of training hard, playing one game at a time, and strategizing to win has prepared Bill Kreiger to motivate people who want to take charge of their lives. Clients appreciate his straightforward style, his optimism, and his sense of humor. At the end of a successful career in college basketball, Bill, who is nearly seven feet tall, has used his potential to help others achieve theirs by developing effective leadership skills. Bill has spoken to groups from five to 1500 all across the United States. His client list includes well-known companies such as American Airlines, Boeing, Mayo Clinic, Meryl Lynch, Pfizer, Verizon, Shell Oil, and the armed forces of Army, Air Force, Marines and the Alaskan National Guard. With over 25 years of professional speaking experience, Bill has positively influenced over 10,000 individuals.

From 1978-1981 Bill played Division I basketball for Montana State University and received Big Sky Conference recognition while establishing several school records. Bill was a Presidents Choice Award recipient while at Franklin Covey. Bill lives in San Antonio, TX with his wife Allyson. He has five children and two daughter-in-laws.
